RESEARCH INTERESTS

My research focuses on the public role of architecture in uncertain, plus contested contemporary urban environments. I study such role by concentrating on "architecture-as-urbanism", and on "architecture's spatial agencies". Through the study of the strategic value of architecture-as-urbanism and of the social practices of architecture's spatial agency, I underwrite the architecture's political dimension through its re-engagement with contemporary urban environment transformations. I put an emphasis on methods with which architectural practice incorporates creatively political issues and seeks a role within a broader system of urban actors. In this way architecture practice makes apparent latent existing situations in the multi-context of the urban environment, (physical, temporal, pragmatic). I contribute into the creation of synergies between material practices such as architecture, urban planning and visual arts that advocate for urban commons in the contemporary city. I do that by oscillating between a reflective practice and a practice based research, thanks to a diversity of activities I have been involved in, such as teaching, practicing, curating and writing. I enrich my research by operating in a highly contested territory, such as the Cypriot one, plus by having an active contribution in the becoming of young European urban design practices through my scientific position in European

The concepts of "contested spaces", "spatial agency", "commons", "urbanity", "translocality" and that of "architecture as politics" have been central to my work.

TAUGHT COURSES, (see www.socratesstratis.com)

Since 2006 I have been teaching several courses mainly urban design studio and theory and an elective course on the public role of architectural practice, (spatial agency). The aim of both courses is to encourage connectivity and active coexistence in the contemporary urban environment. Since 2010 I have been the main advisor in students' diploma projects on architecture-as-urbanism and on spatial agency. I am the main advisor of two doctorate thesis. The first one that finished in 2016 deals with design as an open source of engagement, using European as the field of investigation and the second one addresses issues of urban design and planning in contested spaces such as the city of Famagusta in Cyprus.

IMPLEMENTED URBAN [U], ARCHITECTURAL [A] AND SUPPORT STRUCTURES [S] PROJECTS

(Participation with AA&U For Architecture, Art and Urbanism, see www.aaplusu.com)

Since 2000 I have been collaborating with AA&U For Architecture, Art and Urbanism of which I am one of the main founders. AA & U addresses mostly issues of publicness at urban-architectural scale, using projects as a vehicle for creating knowledge which is constantly feeding back the making of the projects themselves. The AA & U spatial practice is bound by an horizontal approach across architecture, urbanism and support structures which become the indices of performance for all projects.
